President-Elect's Plea for Clear Decks in Congress Goes Unheeded.

sident-elect Harding will assur the role of taskmaster to Congress when the meets to-morrow. His parting injunction to his Congressional colleagues on his one day visit in December was that they "clear the decks for action" on the reconstruction programme, both domestic and foreign, in the special session that he promised to call soon after his inauguration. The Republican steering committees of the Senate and House will attempt to make it possible for that service to their leader to be performed and are to meet Tuesday to perfect their programme it possible.

No one realizes better than they do what a tremendous problem confronts them. They are hampered first of all by the partisan tactics of the minority in the Senate, where the Republicans hold control by the narrow margin of two victes. Headed by some of the shrewdest political manipulators in Congress, the Democrats have been able to make an almost trackless junile of the legislative field in the Senate, until the situation seems almost beyond the power of retrievement.

Their rone best weapon has become the Fordincy emergency tariff bill on farm products. Although they know that it to come to a vote following failure of the Republican attempt to enforce cloture. Their reason for this, it has become known, is to use it to delay man action on other measures to which they are opposed.

These include among other things the clan minimum wage bill, passed long to by the House and now on the Sentence calendar; the reapportionment bill, used more than a week ago by the ouse, holding the House to its present , but shifting Representatives from State to another, so that ten States mbers that other States will in thereby, and several other less im-priant measures to which individual emocratic Senators object. Legislative, the Agricultural and the Post Office appropriation bills. Four more supply bills must be passed by the House, namely, the Army bill, practically complete; the Navy bill, which has been reported, the General Deficiency, also reported, and the Fortifications bill, which is still in committee. The Army and Navy bills both involve hightly controversial subjects, such as the size of the Army and the naval policy, which is the subject of much dissension in the Senate particularly. sension in the Senate particularly.

Constructive Bills Pending.

Constructive BHIs Pending.

There still remain a long list of important bills pending in the House and Senate aside from the supply bills and the energency tariff that are constructive in character, many of them considered highly essential, most of them the target for criticism by many members, and therefore easy to defeat in the closing days of a short session.

There are five bills that stand a very good chance of passing the House. These are the Langley bill for the construction of five hospitals for soldlers of the world war, to be located in five selected areas; the bill of Representative Winslew (Mass.) to make partial payments to various rallroads of their six months suraranteed return under the Esch-Cummins rallroad law, the bill for road construction under Federal and State cooperation carrying an authorization of $100,000,000, the vise passport bill of Representative Newton (Minn.), extending war control for a year over the issuance to prospective immigrants of passports by consular or diplomatic officers, and the bill authorizing return of the body of one unidentified American soldler from France for burial in Arlington National Cemetery as a symbolic memorial.

Important bills pending in the House that probably will fail are: The bill for regulation of the packing industry passed by the Senate and favorably reported to the House from the Agricultural Committee, but amended by substituting the House bill for the Senate bill: regulation of grain futures, on which extensive hearings have been held, but which has not been reported; the so-called Sheppard-Towner maternity bill designed to lower infant mortality through Federal and State cooperation; also the Smith-Towner bill for a cooperative scheme of education and the creation of a new Department of Education, with a new Cabinet officer.

others of which the Senate hopes to pass, that are likely to fall along with important supply bills. Considering first bills that the House has approved, there are the following:

The bill for a soldier bonus, not yet reported from the Finance Committee, although Senators Penrose (Pa.) and McCumber (N. D.) have held out hopes for getting it out of committee; the Nolan minimum wage bill, reported to the Senate, sponsored by Senator Johnson (Cal.) and partly considered by the Senate, though bitterly opposed by Senator Underwood and many in his party; repeal of the war laws, not yet reported out of the Judiciary Committee; reorganization of the War Risk Insurance Bureau, passed last June by the House, and proposing the establishment of 14 war risk insurance branches over the country, and also authorizing postmasters to act as agents in the handling of insurance premiums; the Volstead bill to legalize collective bargaining for agricultural products in interstate commerce, passed by both branches but held up in conference; the reapportionment bill retaining the House at its present size but reducing representation of ten States—Nebraska. The one thing that Senator Harding emphasized in his final appeal to his Republican colleagues for assistance in discharging the trust imposed on the Republican party by the American people was to let no appropriation bill fail. These, he said, are merely routine measures and should be got out of the way of the special session. But there seems for the special session. But there seems reason now to believe that some of the more important of these will fail, although it is inconceivable. The decrease in appropriation would, in my opinion.

WAR OPENS ON COX AS RULER OF PARTY

Letter to White That He Quit as Chairman.

Meeting to Be Held March 1, Mellon and Lowden Have Ac-When Showdown of Votes Is Expected.

New York Herald Bureau. Washington, D. C., Feb. 6. The first definite step to wrest con-of the Presidential campaign in four years.

The letter makes no bones of the fact that Mr. White is expected to step out of the chairmanship. The committee head is reminded of a statement made soon after the last election that he would resign. It is the purpose of the proposed meeting to obtain the resignation, if possible, or to elect some other person to the chairmanship.

The McAdoo followers believe they have votes to get Mr. White out of the chairmanship if he refuses to resign. They are counting on the votes of the forty-nine whose names appeared on the letter and have counted noses in sucil a way as to bring the total to sixty-three. They say further that there are only ninety-eight members of the committee in the United States, the remainder being in the territorial possessions, and that they clearly have a majority sufficient to carry the day.
